PROGRAMME

How do we transform our streets from car-based to inclusive places, prioritising pedestrians and cyclists? What should be the key consideration for future-proofing streets design in a way that allows flexibility for future uses while supporting active travel?

In this breakfast talk we will hear about practical interventions to improve streets in a period of fast technological change. Case studies will be presented to show practical design elements and approaches that could be replicated.

Peter Murray

Curator-in-Chief,
New London Architecture

Peter trained as an architect but has spent much of his career writing about and commenting on architecture rather than practising it. He was editor of Building Design and RIBA Journal before starting Blueprint Magazine in 1983. He is President of Wordsearch the global communications and design consultancy. He is founder of the London Festival of Architecture and is author of various architectural books including "The saga of Sydney Opera House" and "A passion to build". He is a Past Master of The Architects' Company, a visiting professor at IE University in Madrid, Chairman of The London Society and a keen cyclist.

Deborah Saunt

Director, DSDHA

Deborah Saunt is co-founder of the architecture, urban design and research studio DSDHA, whose high-profile spatial strategies include urban masterplans for the reimagining of Tottenham Court Road, the redesign of the public realm around the Royal Albert Hall, and a new building on Piccadilly for The Crown Estate. Sharing The Beautiful Everyday Journey, their toolkit to aid designers and policy makers in integrating cyclist and pedestrian journeys in our street spaces, is the result of a Research Fellowship in the Built Environment from the Royal Commission for the Exhibition of 1851.

Stephen O'Malley

Founding Director, Civic Engineers

Stephen O'Malley is Founding Director of Civic Engineers. Stephen believes in designing and engineering healthy, active and attractive urban neighbourhoods and his skills to achieve this are broad – civil, transport, highways, flood risk, drainage, utilities, structures, ground remediation engineering – to name some. Stephen's fusion and practice of these engineering skills enables the creation of inspirational public spaces that have a positive impact on the environment and enable people to lead healthier and happier lives. This broader, more creative and collaborative approach sets Civic Engineers practice apart and has seen Stephen recognised as an industry expert in his field. He is currently working on projects such as Glasgow Avenues, redesigning streets in Glasgow city centre, urban extension masterplanning in Cork and Liverpool SPD. The practice has studios in Glasgow, Manchester, London and Leeds and employs over 80 people.

Drew Pinazza

Head of Public Spaces,
Grosvenor Britain & Ireland

Drew Pinazza is the Head of Public Spaces at Grosvenor. In 2019, Drew was a jury member for the AJ Architecture Awards and Ashden's International Award for Sustainable Cities and Buildings. He leads some of Mayfair's most distinctive projects and has been a key promoter at the London Design Festival. Drew has worked across the public and private sectors and is formerly of the Jan Gehl-founded Gehl Architects in Copenhagen. He is a passionate advocate of improving our quality of life through better-quality buildings, streets, squares and parks.
